Re: Letter of Recommendation for David Nimer

Dear Members of the Committee on Character and Fitness:

This letter is to recommend David Nimer for admission to the practice of law. David is a deeply contemplative and remarkably insightful legal mind. His intellectual curiosity and unwavering commitment to his clients and to advocating on their behalf is genuine and impressive. In my role as a solo practitioner, law firm owner, and David's supervisor, he has served as my law clerk since the summer of 2024. During that time, David has demonstrated an exceptionally high level of skill, competence, and mental endurance on a number of complex and difficult legal issues.

David's motion drafting has included the following motions: remand; summary judgment; declaratory judgment; to bifurcate; to exclude evidence in limine; to admit evidence in limine; for protective order; to amend pleadings; for remote testimony, and numerous others. David is a thoughtful, and thorough research assistant, and powerful and concise, legal writer.

In the last two years, David has undergone significant personal and character growth and development. He has appropriately shared that he is working with qualified professionals to address some interpersonal, professional, and cognitive challenges he experiences as a result of his attention deficit disorder. David's matter-of-fact openness has facilitated a mutually conscientious, team-based approach to ensuring collaborative management of the timing, quantity, and consistency of his work product and tasks. This team-based approach creates consistent, predictable application of David's insight and brilliance to the firm's tasks and cases.

During David's time with the firm, I have seen significant growth in his ability to harmonize his advocacy skills and talents with the needs of each individual case. Through experience he has gained practical wisdom, and insight. David has grown into a measured, zealous advocate who obtains optimal practicable outcomes on behalf of the firm's clients.

David is an excellent legal mind. He is a genuinely good human being, who has overcome trials and challenges. David will be a trusted advocate on behalf of his clients. He will be an excellent attorney and member of the bar. I heartily and sincerely recommend David Nimer for licensure to the practice of law.

Sincerely,

Brandon J. Squires
